

A warm, autumnal still life featuring pumpkins, lit candles, and a lantern. The scene is dimly lit, with the primary light source being several lit candles. One large candle is housed in a wire lantern in the foreground. To its right, a cluster of small tealight candles sits on a reflective surface. In the background, more pumpkins and a tall, thin candle are visible. The overall mood is cozy and inviting. The text "A BIGGER TABLE" is overlaid in a large, white, sans-serif font, and "HOLIDAY STORIES" is overlaid below it in a smaller, similar font.

Harvest's Bounty Lyrics and Vocals by

Jurine Elkins

"Come one and come all
For the bounty we share will fill the hall
Sing one and sing all
Raise your glass and raise it tall

Cast your eyes to the sky
See the stars burn in the night
The stars have lead us to this home
Now we have no more need to roam

Gather your best to share

Cast your eyes to the sky
See the stars burn in the night
The stars have brought us to this home
Now we have no more need to roam

Come one and come all
Raise your glass and raise it tall
Sing one and sing all
For the bounty we share will fill us all"
